We've paints all ready to use for any purpose.

On Thursday, an afternoon party was given at the McAllister residence by Mesdames John A. McAllister and Roy McAllister. The decorations were of astors and golden rod arranged most artistically. More than forty ladies were present. In a guessing contest prizes were awarded to Mrs. Rue of Indiana and Mrs. B. F. Riter, the former receiving a fine cameo vase, and the latter a Raphaela basket. Luncheon consisting of rare delicacies was served at 6 p. m. by Misses Elva Ellason and Verna McAllister. Miss Florence McAllister received the guests. The event was one of the really "swell" affairs of the season.

The defendant in the divorce suit of Mary A. Jones vs. Willard T. Jones filed an answer to the complaint of his wife and a cross complaint in which he makes grave charges against the plaintiff in the district court yesterday. The defendant denies part of the allegations made by his wife, and in turn accuses her of being untrue to him. Upon information he names several occasions when the plaintiff has been guilty of infidelity and has named Fred W. Chase as her paramour. The defendant asks that the plaintiff take nothing but her suit and that he be the one awarded the decree of divorce. The couple were married at Logan, December 5, 1887—Salt Lake Tribune.

A Word About NECKWEAR

Dame Fashion says that shapes may go to either extreme—very large or very small—and we have prepared a generous supply of each. For those who like the small shapes, we have "Midgets" in very narrow Four-in-hands and Diminutive Ties. These are made from exquisite silks, especially woven for these Cravats and the results are certainly beautiful. As for the larger shapes, we have the Four in hands, Folded English Squares, Imperials, and Ties of Generous Proportions.

The silks are the finest imported and domestic weaves and the colorings show soft, artistic blends that will please the most tasteful of men. You can select stripes or fancy patterns, or rich self-patterned effects; but whatever you buy at this store, you may rest assured will be in perfectly good style for whatever occasion it is intended. We make a specialty of extra fine Cravats for formal afternoon and evening wear.

We sell the Finest Neckwear in the Country for the price: Twenty-five and Fifty Cents.
